Relief Expected Late Wednesday

By JOHN MIKA

A fierce sun today made one last assault on Victoria's August temperature record before an expected column of cooler air relieves the heat-besieged city.

The blistering heat rays pushed the official noon temperature to 87, toppling a "day" record for the second consecutive time and threatening again to break the 91-degree record for an August high set in 1942.

It was two degrees higher than Monday's noon temperature and still climbing.

The record for Aug. 9, set at 84.4 in 1902, was surssed shortly after 11 a.m. after a second day when the overnight low was a sleep-robbing 60 degrees.

Monday, the temperature soared beyond the Aug. 8 record of 84 degrees in 1920 to a high of 90.9 degrees—only .1 degrees under the highest August temperature ever recorded here since the record-books were opened.

Several inland sections of the city neared the all-time high level set July 19, 1941, at 95.2 degrees. The mid-town Bay Street area was recorded officially at 95 degrees. Tillicum area at 94, Cordova Bay at 90 and Patricia Bay Airport at 92.

LONDON (AP)-The following information may come as a shock to half the population. A British insurance company survey has shown women are safer drivers than men.

The company announced Monday it is cutting liability premiums for women drivers 10 per cent. Announcing this decision, insurance broker Herbert Sheppard, a man, stated:

Women have fewer accidents than men and make fewer claims. They are less inclined to take chances, they drive more slowly and are less likely to drink intoxicants during a journey."
And he said women have less difficulty than men in obtaining witnesses after an accident.

Sheppard said his firm-the H. A. Sheppard Underwriting and Insurance Company—reached these con-clusions after a survey of driving records and accident claims.

Unfinished Business

ONE OF THE MAJOR ISSUES of the next national election was definitely established a few days ago when the Federal Government finally drove through its crippling amendments to the anti-combines laws.

No piece of legislation sponsored by Mr. Diefenbaker has provoked the stubborn opposition applied to these amendments. Day after day the Liberal Party and the CCF fought them clause by clause and word by word—first, because they are objectionable in themselves and, secondly, because they represent the will of big corporations that are eager to minimize competition in eager to m business.

With its huge majority in Parliament, the Government could not fail to pass its legislation but we have seen, so far, only the begin-ning of this struggle. It will be It will be carried into the next election as a basic quarrel of Conservative versus Liberal principle

In the meantime the public will for itself whether the Liberal Party is right in saying that the price maintenance by the back door, though denying any such intention.

From now on a manufacturer cannot directly order a retail store to sell his products at a certain price, but if the retailer cuts the suggested price the manufacturer can easily coerce him.

The new law sets up a series of onvenient defences for the manufacturer who refuses to sell his goods to a retailer. Not many small retailers, we may be sure, will dare to defy the price schedules suggested by the manufacturer. Over a wide field of manufactured goods retail competition, so far as price is concerned, will disappear.

The record shows that when price maintenance was abolished under the former Liberal Government the price of many standard articles fell sharply. It will be interesting to see whether they begin to rise again when price maintenance is revived, in fact if not in many

It will be interesting also to see how combines will utilize the many escape hatches opened in the new law and how the courts will inter-pret all those technical changes which are designed only to dull the sharp edge of competition.

There is nothing new in all this.
The Conservative Party has never believed in the anti-combines legislation first introduced by a Liberal Government some fifty years ago and Conservative Governments have always whittled it down by statute by administrative methods. Some important Liberals, have doubted the wisdom of their party's policy. Big businessmen like Mr. Robert Fowler, head of the nation-wide pulp and paper organizaargued that under modern condi-tions competition, as enforced in the past, is out of date and, indeed,

But Mr. Pearson, though for-merly a close friend of Mr. Fowler, has fatly rejected these arguments. He has refused to alter the historic Liberal policy on combines by a whit and if he comes to office will immediately restore the law which the present Parliament has so gravely weakened. An old, familiar issue is now in the open again where the people can see and judge it for themselves.

UNITED NATIONS' SECREtary-General Dag Hammarsk-jold is a man of notably conservative judgments and cautious comments. Thus when he says flatly that the Congo problem is a "question of peace or war" it would be wise for the nations of the world to pay

"When saying peace or war," adds Mr. Hammarskjold, "I do not limit my perspective to the Congo."

The United Nations faces a stern test in the chaotic Congo. Yet it is a test, not of the organization itself, but of the member states which compose it. The U.N. has demonstrated its ability to obtain troops, to transport them and to set up the organization necessary to carry out policing measures. had already done this in the Suez emergency. With a provincial seces-sion movement in the Congo the has been further complicated, the U.N. structure appears capable of carrying out any duties

The more serious problem arises in the need for co-operation among the United Nations' members, and this includes Belgium, whose con-tinued presence in the Congo has become the fulcrum for East-West seesawing. It also includes Russia, whose threat of armed intervention has done nothing to aid a settlement and whose protest against the assistance of Canadian civilians and army technicians — requested by the United Nations — adds further ideological complications to the problem. The fact that Canada is a NATO ally of Belgium has little but Soviet propaganda significance in face of the present need for ferry pilots and French-speaking communications experts in the troubled

The Congo fiasco was the result independence being assumed without proper preparation and training for Congolese office-holders and the voting public. Now the shakily-based Government itself is threatened with political defeat.

The failure of an attempt at defeat. The failure of an attempt at doubts himself, since he alternately fore democratic government may be a casts prosperity or ruin and, as a truly matter of satisfaction and political opportunity for non-democratic forces-and the rich copper and uranium resources of Katanga add their own elements to the picture. THIS COMMUNITY HAS fied confidence in such floats. I learned with regret of the accident which claimed another young life at a crowded swimming

According to the newspaper ac-count, an eight-year-old boy, a nonswimmer, was playing in an inflated tire. He passed from notice and a man, returning from a longer swim, found him on the bottom in water over the boy's head.

The assumption is that the lad had slipped from his tire and gone down unnoticed.

Such tragedies are far more frequent than they should be. Use of artificial means of keeping afloat and artificial means which are not as safe as they seem to be-has caused a number of drownings in this country.

Swimming experts and those familiar with water hazards are virtually unanimous in condemning the use of such equipment or toys. A child or an adult who is not competent in the water places unjusti-

Another point is emphasized by the tragedy last Sunday at Beaver costs will also be advantageous. The cost of administration of the B.C. # Convalescence in Cuba

AS MIGHT BE EXPECTED, Premier Fidel Castro's illness has raised rumors of a wider nature regarding his health and the possibility that he might have to relinquish active control of Cuba.

The revolution that put Castro into power was a "one-man" type, and the government which he now imposes is also of that nature. Two lieutenants might carry his burden if necessary his brother, Raul, minister of the armed forces, and Ernesto Guevara, president of the National Bank. But these men are said to hold little popular favor; they could rule only as the aides of an ailing Fidel Castro, not as his say "I did not believe it could happen

A Question of Who Is the Optimist

rebuke to this reporter (more in row than in anger) was not the sort he had quoted me with reasonable ac-curacy. Other matters of somewhat greater importance are under way these days. It was surprising, there-fore to find his indignant comment on a rather humdrum piece of mine in The New York Herald Tribune hison popping up all over You never know what will interest the public.

You never know either what stinging and twisted shape an innocuous state-ment will take when it is remoulded by a skilled potter of semantics like Mr. Bennett.

PHUS my casual remark that Canada faces some years of difficult econ-omic readjustment—surely a platitude and mild exercise in the obvious—beand mild exercise in the obvious—be-comes, in Mr. Bennett's version, a pre-diction of five years of ruinous depres-sion, almost a whisper of death. Some readers, as I understand from their letters, understand that I prophesied a bloody revolution at 9 o'clock Monday

My economic notions (and even Mr Bennett's) would not be worth pursuing if his public announcement did not raise two moral and philosophic questions which may not have occurred to him. Now, I am not disputing his considered opinion that I am a "professional pessimist" who belongs to the 18th century and should remain in the woods smoking my pipe (an ideal arrangement if one could afford it), nor his prediction that the next five years will be the richest in our history if Mr. Coyne will not the remaining the country. ly stop ruining the country.

to deceive foreigners, unfortunately deception won't work in practical business. American investors, from whom Mr. Behnett frequently borrows money for his Government without, of course, ever incurring any debt, know all about the Canadian economy down to the last decimal. There are some quite clever llows in Wall Street.

More interesting in morals and philosophy, however, is Mr. Bennett's second dictum, now widely popular among politicians, that if we are in trouble we can get out of it without pain or inconcan get out of it without pain of the venience by the manipulation of the venience by the manipulation of Mr. money system, the removal of Mr. Coyne and a few changes in the ledgers.

It will work fine if we only doctor the books a little, spend more money created by the central bank, devalue the dollar and achieve the good society in the woods of the 18th century or the im-proved bomb shelter of the 20th, according to individual whim.

Here, incidentally, the historian may hote an interesting paradox, a reversal of the old North American pattern.

Historically the hope of solving all problems by soft money came out of the impoverished, debt-ridden western frontier as a protest against the financial power of the east. Oddly enough, it now comes from British Columbia which, says Mr. Rennett's latest election hook. says Mr. Bennett's latest election book-let, is by far the richest area in Canada,

Semblance of Order

An additional arena is badly need-course it desperately needs more hand-outs from the much poorer nation at

FIRST, he says that no patriotic Canadian would tell the American people, as I did, about our national difficulties. If they exist we should keep them to ourselves in that silent patriotism which Dr. Samuel Johnson called the last refuge of provincial premiers.

WE need not quibble about these minor details. The real issue raised by Mr. Bennett and many like him is not merely the issue between soft and hard money but the issue between soft and hard solutions far beyond the realm of money, between orderly accounts. of money, between orderly economic evolution and sudden magic, between process and spasm, between the possible and the impossible. And this is an age-old dispute of philosophy much deeper than any dispute of method, pos sibly deeper even than Social Credit,

In short, we are asked by Mr. Ben nett and other philosophers of his school to believe that only some small rtificial barrier stands between us and the great age, some obstacle that car removed by statute, order-in-council a stroke of Mr. Coyne's pen.

We are asked to believe that Can dians can have all they want of every thing, unlimited opulence within their rn bomb shelter, while most of the world doesn't know where its next meal is coming from but is rapidly learning how to make bombs.

WE are asked, moreover, to believe that all this would be not only sound economics but the best of morals, the higher patriotism, the true fruits of enlightened philosophy.

Mr. Bennett may seem to be wasting his time when he attacks a contrary view of things but he isn't. Nothing could be more useful than his clear definition of the sovereign issue before He has turned the whole argument upside down just the same.

By expecting his philosophy to be accepted, the optimist takes a very pessimistic view of the Canadian people. In believing that they will solve their problems in the end by an opposite philosophy the professional pessimist may be guilty of a wild over-optimism.

He subtly suggests that the Congo erup-

Mr. Meighen's life contained many paradoxes. He sat in Parliament as a Fural member for Manitoba but he was the enemy of the low tariffs and open competition on which the West de-pends for its progress.

Apparent Seizure

No one could match his respect for the House of Commons or his knowl-edge of its traditions but in 1926 he med to blunder into an impatient seizure of power in breach of constitutional precedent.

During his whole career he had a passion for the British heritage but at one fateful Imperial Conference he wrenched British policy in a new direc tion by persuading London to be more responsive to the wishes of Washington.

From his own early harsh days he knew what adversity could be but he never wavered in his horror of policies that promised social justice by enlarging the power of the state.

By every test he towered above the dingy and clamorous mediocrities who disputed his right to lead the Conservative Party but at periodic intervals that party wearied of his imperious mastery and rejected him.

At every important crisis Mr. Meighen, never afraid of responsibility. became so conspicuous an advocate of the Cabinet's policies that he stood identified in the public mind as the chief author of these controversial measures. That certainly was his experience in 1919 when he intervened decisively to end the Winnipeg general strike. He was obeying the instructions of the Cabinet but the manner in which he asserted that authority earned him the enduring suspicion and resentment of organ-ized-labor.

A more grievous legacy was be-queathed by the First World War. In 1917 the Union Government decided to apply the policy of conscription and Mr. Meighen, as a Cabinet member, became active in a campaign to make the policy effective throughout Canada.

Monstrous Charge

For reasons not unnconnected with the base strategems of political advan-tage, Mr. Meighen stood accused as the enemy of Quebec, a monstrous charge, for no one could have believed more passionately in national unity or shown more graceful respect for French-speak ing Canadians. Yet the horrid prejudices excited against Mr. Meighen in mercial hockey and this venture is expected to yield considerable revenue to the city. But surely the Memorial Arena was built for the benefit of the writer adopts just such an attitude. He subtly suggests that the Congo even Quebec haunted and shadowed his ca

This statement confused and per-

It also helped to strain relations with Mr. Howard Ferguson, the leader of the Ontario Conservative Nevertheless, on one point I do agree; the Congo was not ready. Yet, up to six or seven months ago, and at Party, whose speech against Mr. Meighen helped to turn the national convention of 1927 against him.

Victoria's tourist business is booming.

The number of visitors last month increased by 48 per cent over the number here in July, 1959, William Hawkins Jr., commissioner of the Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau, told Victoria Gyros Monday.

Passengers coming into Victoria and Sidney docks totalled 37,477 last month compared with 25,611 the pre-

An increase was also noted in June when 5.642 cars carrying 18,147 visitors arrived at the same two ports compared with 16,034 people in 4,980 cars in June, 1959.

These figures, Mr. Hawkins said, were conservative and did not include tourists arriving on the new govern ment ferries.

"Conservative estimates show that last year 300,000 visitors spent $4,500,000 in Victoria alone," said Mr. Haw-

THREE-DAY FESTIVAL ENDS Emily Carr Life on Stage

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A premier performance of "Emily Carr." a stage biography, was the highlight Saturday night of the three-day Emily Carr Festival

The play, by Toronto teacher and dramatist Herman Voaden, was staged by the drama department of Queen's University.

Amelia Hall played the brilliant British Columbia artist.

The play was judged one of the 10 best out of 185 submitted last year at the Strat-ford, Ont., play-writing competition. It presents the development of Miss Carr as a painter and writer and the exciting, humorous and sometimes tragic experiences of her career.

exhibition of Emily Carr paintings from the C. S. Band collection, a showing of the national film board picture Klee Wyck, a new film strip, Emily Carr, and a display of her books and photographs.

Miss Carr was born in Victoria in 1875 and died there in 1945 Ranked as one of Canada's greatest and most original painters, her work is represented in nearly all important Canadian collections. Her first important Canadian collections. Her first book, Klee Wyck, written after ill health curtailed her sketching trips, won the gov-ernor general's award for non-fiction in 1945. She wrote five other books, three of them published posthumously.

VANCOUVER (CP)-British Columbia Lions hope to break an attendance record Thursday night when Winnipeg Blue Bombers open the Western Interprovincial Football Union season in Empire

Officials say 25,000 tickets have been sold for the game so far and good weather could bring out a crowd larger than the Canadian record of 34,273 that attended the Aug. 31 game here last year.

Record-breaking would entail putting temporary seats around the track that surrounds the playing field in the 32,706-seat stadium.

NEW YORK—Haste spoils many a sure thing. Wise guys are patient. Suckers can't wait. Take your time and loaded dice will roll enough naturals to break any game. All Frank Lane, the general manager of the Indians had to do, was sit cosy and put on the good-buddy smile. The proposition was all locked up. Hangmen are seldom in a hurry.

Joe Gordon, the manager of the Indians, who was traded off to Detroit for Jimmy Dykes, was settled before the season started. He was sitting in what the old bootleg mobs called the St. Bouis seat. They put you next to the driver and the guy behind you blew your head off with a hand gun. No one turns his back on an enemy. So the assassin always talked real nice until the pistol went off. The last time around Lane acted as if he were a fan of Gordon's, making the road trip for kicks. It was all up to Joe. Lane said, cat-smiling and playing it sincere. The ball club belongs to Joe. What he does with Jimmy Piersall is his own decision.

Till go along with any move my man makes. You give a manager a team you must permit him to manage the 25 players on the squad. You can't make exceptions. But I'll back up Joe. Sitting in the St. Louis seat, Gordon couldn't et himself from the boss. He had to hold still for the Lane, normally a man of savage candor, was being polite and considerate. The mouse never plays with the cat. It's the cat who looks for laughs.

You remember how it was last year when the Indians were still scuffling for the pennant. At breakfast on a Sunday morning, Lane made his play. There wasn't any con then. The manager cost the Indians the pennant.

It was laid right out, brutally told and precisely stated. The case was closed. Gordon couldn't handle people and he allowed hunches to influence him. He was a guy who he allowed hunches to influence him. He was a guy who didn't deserve a second chance. That was Lane's story on a Sunday morning as last September died and the Indians were in third place but still contenders. It was goodbye, Joe. He wanted Leo Durocher and he got him. The new manager of the Indians would be Durocher as soon as the ink was on the document. But the baseball journalists of Cleveland demanded that Gordon be reinstated. There was a front-page adjustial which suggested Lane buy a was a front-page ditorial which suggested Lane buy a ticket on the same plane that Gordon took out of Cleveland.

The people who invested their money in the franchise refused to honor Lane's pledge to Durocher. Back came Gordon and do you know how Lane brought him on? At the press conference, he said come in, Leo, and Gordon walked into the room. He could afford to be funny. He was the hunter. Time was all he needed.

Fans Forgot Faltering Pitching Staff

The Piersall angle was all he needed. The buffs forgot about the young pitching staff coming apart. They neglected to wonder how Minnie Minoso was going to be replaced. The sad wildness of Piersall consumed their interest. And Lane stood pat.

It was obvious that the team was agitated by Piersall. They didn't find his acts of rage and pathetic comedy entertaining. After a while, living with it every day, their pity were out.

It was easy to plant. There were the anecdotes defining Gordon's curtness to Piersall. Tenderness might do it, Lane said, because this is a guy you can't show out. No one ever saw Lane so polite before, so distant and yet so

There are those who ciaim Piersall caused people to turn out. He was going along, claimed the skeptical, because Piersall put money in the till. But the attendance was down in Cleveland. That's usually the responsibility of the general manager. But it all fell in when the players called a meeting to protest Piersall's behavior and then called it off. The argument was clinched. The ball club was getting away from Gordon. The long farewell was

The team's a mess this season. Maybe Dykes will be

The team's a mess this season. Maybe Dykes will be able to tell you how it can be straightened out. I can't, and Lane passed the buck. It's Dykes' move now, but since when has he been licensed to practice psychiatry?

Teams have never traded managers before. But it is an historic deal in other ways. It may be the most cynical ever negotiated in a field where sentiment is considered a virus. But it won't be commemorated in the Hall of Fame. The shills of the sport will not mention it at father and son The shills of the sport will not mention it at father and son hot, hardly anybody could stay in their houses at night, let alone sleep in them.

But Lane may be proud of it as the perfect example of baseball statesmanship. The stakes are bigger, but not even Khrushchev pulled anything cufer.

I can remember the people going to the parks to lie on the grass and try to get some sleep. They even curled up on the lawns of the legislative buildings.

Oh, I tell you, it gets really hot in Winnipeg.

Then you take Toronto.

When it gets hot in Toronto, the sidewalks don't exactly melt. They're baked too hard to melt.

The thing about Toronto's heat, though, it's such a damp heat. I remember walking out of the hotel onto the street at Toronto, and before I walked a half block, you'd have thought I'd walked through a hot shower.

I tell you it's really humid hot in Toronto.

Of course, come to think of it, it gets humid hot in Windsor, too.

But for real dry hot, you haven't been really dry hot unless you've been in Bakersfield, Calif.

Bakersfield, Calif., is the dryest dry hot anybody could ever experience this side of an acetylene furnace.

And you call this hot in Victoria!

Just think of all the thousands of places where it's better then Victoria.

Decision on a forest clo-sure on Vancouver Island and the coastal mainland is "under serious consideration" today.

"The only reason we haven't had a closure so far," said a forest service official, "is that the number and size of fires haven't been great enough." The hazard on the coast is listed "extreme."

Outlook for the interior is grim, too, with the hot spell now on the coast spreading eastward.

Today, with seven new fires and 19 burning on the coast, closure is imminent.

Relief Expected Late Wednesday

By JOHN MIKA

A fierce sun today made one last assault on Victoria's August temperature record before an expected column of cooler air relieves the heat-besieged city.

The blistering heat rays pushed the official noon emperature to 87, toppling a "day" record for the second consecutive time and threatening again to break the 91-degree record for an August high set in 1942.

It was two degrees higher than Monday's noon temperature and still climbing.

The record for Aug. 9, set at 84.4 in 1902, was sursed shortly after 11 a.m. after a second day when th overnight low was a sleep-robbing 60 degrees.

Monday, the temperature soared beyond the Aug. 8 second of 84 degrees in 1920 to a high of 90.9 degrees—only .1 degrees under the highest August temperature ever recorded here since the record books were opened in 1899.

Several inland sections of the city neared the all-time high level set July 19, 1941, at 95.2 degrees. The mid-town Bay Street area was recorded officially at 95 degrees. Tillicum area at 94, Cordova Bay at 90 and Patricia Bay Airport at 92.

I can remember being in Winnipeg when it was so hot, hardly anybody could stay in their houses at night, let alone sleep in them.

I can remember the people going to the parks to lie on the grass and try to get some sleep. They even curled up on the lawns of the legislative buildings.

Oh, I tell you, it gets really hot in Winnipeg.

Then you take Toronto.

When it gets hot in Toronto, the sidewalks don't exactly melt. They're baked too hard to melt.

The thing about Toronto's heat, though, it's such a damp heat. I remember walking out of the hotel onto the street at Toronto, and before I walked a half block, you'd have thought I'd walked through a hot shower.

I tell you it's really humid hot in Toronto.

Of course, come to think of it, it gets humid hot in

But for real dry hot, you haven't been really dry hot unless you've been in Bakersfield, Calif.

Bakersfield, Calif., is the dryest dry hot anybody could ever experience this side of an acetylene furnace.

And you call this hot in Victoria!

Just think of all the thousands of places where it's
